

Chamber encourages business to make own risk assessments

Nelson Tasman Chamber of Commerce Chief Executive Dot Kettle attended the launch of the Cawthron Report on the Effects of Climate Change on the Nelson Tasman Region on 7 December 2009.

“This report makes an important contribution as it is based on the latest available information and is written in a clear and easily digestible form” said Dot Kettle

“The Chamber encourages businesses to read the report and make their own assessment on the likelihood of the effects being realised and what steps they wish to make to plan for and mitigate any such risk realizing.

“The Nelson region is a showcase for the rest of the country. Local government, the business community, our research institute and the wider community are all working together to make information and services available.

“The Chamber commends the Nelson City Council on the Sustainable Business Advisor position which provides businesses with the opportunity to get advice on how to make energy, waste and water savings in their day to day business” Dot Kettle said.
